The cockroach does not have any pain receptors and is unable to feel any physical pain. All they can detect is the electrical stimulation of tiny antennae. The cockroach's motor system is a bit less advanced than that of a human, but it makes up for it in speed and energy efficiency. The cockroach is also very hardy and can survive for years without food. This little pest has very big ambitions, if you ask the cockroach. The cockroach has a human-sized brain and can solve any problem that comes along. This includes sorting piles of money, recognizing faces, recognizing objects and even understanding the instructions of a human. The cockroach also has one more thing in common with humans: It is hard-wired to make more cockroaches.Q: Prevent a file from being deleted when file is open I have a Qt application where I open a file which is read and the data is stored in a QSqlTableModel. I would like to prevent the file from being deleted even if the file is open in the application, otherwise I will lose the data. How can I do this? I was looking at the QFileSystemWatcher, but I have no idea how to use it. A: You can use QFileWatcher and listen for QFileSystemWatcher::fileChanged signal. Then you can detect which file was changed and if you want to prevent deleting it, you can just postpone deleting until signal is emitted. You can find an example on Qt Documentation.
